Lewis from Pennington, N.J., on July 11 is the cause of a great deal of anxiety and speculation in Pennington and a number of neighboring towns, where she was widely known and respected. She is known to have come as far as Bound Brook on a New York train, and Inspector Byrnes has been asked to look for her as found this city. Mi-s Lewis was a specific property of the city. Mi-s Lewis was a specific property of the city. Mi-s Lewis was a specific property of the city. Mi-s Lewis was a specific property of the city. Mi-s Lewis was a specific property of the city of school teacher at Marshall's Corner, two and a half miles from Pennington, and usually spent her Sundays in Trenton, where she had many warm friends. She was a bright, intelligent, and attractive girl of 21, with fair complexion and brown hair and eyes. Her face was not exactly pretty, but mobile and winning, and her figure was plump and finely mounded. She was really in conversation, vivacious, and extremely popular with women as well as men. She was unusually independent in her ways. She was a church member and was for years very regular in both church and Sunday school duties at the Methodist Church at Pennington.

She came from Lambertville. N. J., five years ago. Her mother died about that time, and her father, who had let his family and whom Bue scarcely knew, has married again and is living in Allentown. Pa. After graduating terrilli. from the Lambartville High School she went to the Methodia seminary an Fennington for a year's study in special branches, borrowing a small amount of money from John H, Butterfoss of Lambertville to help her through. She gave her note for this money. For two 'years she taught a country school at Woodville, five miles from Pennington. Two years ago she went to Marshall's Corner to teach. She gave satisfaction, and was engaged there for the coming year. While there she boarded with John Eagan, a respected farmer. But she always spent her Sundays at Pennington, so she could attend church. For a long while stayed at the houses of various friends there. Then she got a room at the Irving House for a while over Sundays. Finally, she boarded with Mr, and Mrs. John Mei herson, an elderly couple living near the railroad station. Everybody in and around Pennington speaks in rraise of Miss Lewis. She had numerous admirers among young men, but never had any "stendy company," as the phrase goes around there. While one of the rayest girls in or near there. While one of the gayest girls in or near the town, and one of the most exacting in matters of dress and personal appearance, she was always discreet, and her conduct never aroused the least uniavorable comment.

When the school at Marshall's Corner closed for the summer, in June, Miss Lewis moved her belongings to Mrs. McPherson's house, in Pennington. She sometimes seemed a little distracted and worried, and talked about getting some employment for the summer vacation. It was learned afterward that she had been pressed for the payment of the money she had borrowed of Mr. Butterfoss, Mr. Butterfoss died about three months ago, and his executors were pressing all claims. The amount ecutors were pressing all claims. The amount of Miss Lewis's note is not believed to exceed $100. At the time of her disappearance she owed Mrs. Mel'herson $18 for six weeks' board, it is not supposed that she had other dobts. Her salary as a country teacher was very small and, except for her modest dress, her expenditures were very small. She had quito a little gioney with her when she left. Her friends think that she was anxious for summer simplyment only that she might pay off the Butterfoss, note. Her fior's to get employment in Fennington and Trenton were unsuccessful.

On July 9 Miss Lewis dropped in at the drug store of George W. Scarborouth in Pennington. Mr. Scarborough and know her singeform. Mr. Scarborough and know her singborough thouse friend, both at Lambertville and Jennington. Miss Lewis smiled as she entered the store and said.

PEERSKILL CAMP, July 29.—Col. Welsh did not take his men of Buffaio out even for battalion drill. It was his turn to use the new parade ground, and that unturfed plane was a slide of mud. Major Downs had his separate companies' men out, and their drill was nearly over when a cry arose from the bluff overlooking the road that winds at its foot: "Here they come; the Cadets!" It was the lads from West Point, out for the annual excursion which the senior class is allowed to make to this post. NEWS OF THE RAILROADS,

Latest Information of Interest from All Quarters. The New York and New England directors

at their regular monthly meeting yesterday had nothing to say about selling the road. They did, however, buy a road, namely, the Providence and Springfield Bailroad, which, by the construction of 7's miles from Pascoag to East Thompson, will give the New England a direct line from Worcester to Providence. The Providence and Springfield Railroad was projected as early as 1853, but only 22 8-10 miles, from Providence to Pascong, was ever built. It is a parallel of a branch of the Old dence and Springfiel he. The little road has a capital stock of $100,$510,000 of which has been issued. In a New England road bought it in order to keep its competitors from getting hold of it. It should make a valuable getting hold of it. It should make a valuable freight line.
The June statement of the New England's business shows receipts of $514.832. an increase of $34.934 over June. 1899. There was an increase of $27.777 in freight traffic.

The Freight Committee of the Trunk Line Association listened yesterday to the report of a sub-committee which went to Chicago to hear the objections of the Board of Trade of that city against the new uniform bill of lading. Over 100 railroads approve the bill, and I will go into effect on Aug. I. As before intimated, a wall has gone up from small shippers because the bill is made non-negotiable. They fear that capitalists will drive them out of the bisiness. The sub-committee reported that Commissioner Blanchard had soothed people in his association by informing them that by billing goods "to order" all the advantages of negotiability were secured.

The Franconia was spoken by the pilot behind her. One of the children was a baby in arms. Ten minutes later Minnie Bernstein, who lives on the same floor, noticed a sus-picious smell of burning oil. A moment later there was an explosion in the Warschauer rooms. Minnie ran screaming down into the street. August Springer and Frank Frederic ran up to the rooms and burst in the door. They found three separate fires, one in each of the three rooms. One was in the bodroom near the door, where a pile of rags soaked with benzine was burning. Another was in the sitting room, and hanging directly over it was a can full of benzine which was leaking and adding fuel to the flames. Hanging from a bracket in the sitting room was an ox bladder half full of benzine with a pin hole in the bottom of it. It hung directly over a table and was wrarped in fly netting, which hung down and stretched over the carnet to the end of the room, where the fire had been already started. It was evident that the netting was intended as a fuse to lead to the bladder.

In the kitchen was another bladder handing from the wall in shreds, while burning benefine was scattered all about. It was this bladder which had exploided. There was not of fat on the kitchen fire just ready to be the control of the co

Two of Them Lost Through Cant, J. C. Dair's Blow at the Wrestle.

No wrestling match that has taken place in New York in years caused so much excitement as that of last night at the National Theatre. on the Bowery, between Malakoff, the Russian giant, and Ernest Roeber, the German champion. An hour before the doors were opened a erowd of a hundred or more as-embled, and when fadmission was finally permitted the gallery gods flocked in and swarmed into the upper story of the house. When the downstairs public were admitted they came in goodly numbers, too, and filled the lower pertion of the theatre more than comfortably. It was a good-natured crowd. In spite of the heat, but nineteen out of every twenty of 'em went there to see Roeber win. Their predilection was shown when the wrestlers were introduced. The Russian got a hand clap and the German got a yell.

In the first fall Roeber assumed the aggressive, and attempted to secure neck or body holdo four times, but was always evaded. The big Russian held his head down like a schoolbig liussian held his head down like a schoolboy who had been called up to be whipped, but he escaped the German's grasts, all the same.
Roeber got a good grit around his body, but was shaken off. Once more Roeber flung his arms about Malakod's breast and rushed him into the wings. The nensued a ferce struggle.
The Russian wouldn't down unless he had to,
and showed his determination in his movements. But he had to, thoeber flung him over on his left side, and slowly but surely proseed got up and relled like mad. Time, a minutes.

The big chan had made a strong defence, but it was only a defence.
The attempt to grin the second fall was twice interrupted. Roeber, on the call of time, again took the effensive, but, after a few seconds, was sent to his knees. He formed a bridge which the Russian could not break, and the big man gave up the job after two triais. The

on his hands and knees, and steried away.
The first panes in the proceedings was when the referee saw that Roeber was stopied and Malkoff's nails were examined. They were found to be very long.
The nails were cut off after a delay of three or four minutes, and the men went at it again.
Roeber was still confident and Malakoff apaile,

Carl, O'Brien said: "We left New York on July 21, and had a rough passage, with head winds all the way. We arrived off Fernandina bar at 5 P. M. on the 28th, and were spoken by pilots, but did not take any, thinking it unnecessary, as I had a good chart. I was about abreast of the City of Austin wreck when the vessel became unmanageable. A strong southwest wind was blowing, and the vessel drawing seven feet forward and fourteen aft. I stopped the engine and backed, and just as the vessel touched bottom let go the anchor. The anchor chains parted, and the vessel some. At 11 P. M. sho began making water. I worked the steam purmus, and kept the water down until I A.
